Ohio Coal Operators To Reject Federal Conference Proposal
UNIONS SEE NO HOPE FOR MINE PEACE

Plan of Secretary of Labor Davis Meets With Rebuke—Ask Parley Be Mandatory

COLUMBUS, Mar. 10 — While southern Ohio coal operators were meeting here today to frame a reply to the request made by Secretary of Labor Davis for a joint conference between operators and unions coal miners, Percy Tetlow, state director of industrial relations, publicly declared that "the government should demand the coal operators to meet the miners."

It is expected that the southern Ohio operators will reject the conference proposal of Secretary Davis. These operators were the first to announce that they propose to enter into negotiations with their employees separate from other fields in the central competitive district with a view to negotiating a wage agreement.

Stating that, because the wage controversy is a national one, the state cannot compel the operators and miners to meet in a joint conference, Director Tetlow declared that the operators position is "indefensible."

"The agreement to meet prior to April 1 was the outcome of a governmental commission appointed by President Wilson in 1920 and the miners have shown an earnest desire to meet the operators in an effort to settle the present wage controversy," said Director Tetlow.

LORAIN DEM. WOMEN FIGHT OVER MAYOR

LORAIN, March 10 — A regular cat and dog time took place last evening at the American Legion hall when the Women's Democratic Club held a meeting. From the star of the meeting, the faction representing Mayor Grall, and the faction opposed to him were at loggerheads.

A heated argument took place between Mrs. Katherine Scott, president of the club, who is also Mayor Grall's secretary, and Mrs. Margaret May, of South Lorain, who is a leading Grall opponent.

Things came to a head when Mrs. Scott finally ordered Mrs. May removed from the hall by a policeman. Mrs. May stood her ground, defied the police to put her out, and then the rest of the women got busy.

Mrs. Scott was removed as president, and also as chairman, and Mrs. May was elected chairman pro tem, after which Mrs. Scott left the hall.

During the controversy some of the women left the hall in disgust, feeling that they had had enough of politics if that was the way they were run.

Last night's outbreak was an echo of a similar scene at the meeting the night before of the Men's Democratic Club, when opponents of Mayor Grall got control of the meeting.

The League of Women Voters, of Lorain, on the other hand, thru their president, Mrs. George Cuddeback, and Secretary, Mrs. Franklin Williams, today passed a resolution commending the appointment of Joseph Gould as safety director, and commending him for his excellent work in helping to suppress crime.

BULLETINS

NEW YORK, March 10 — Hamilton Holt, magazine editor, has been decorated with the order of the Knight of the Legion of Honor for promoting good relations between France and America.

MOSCOW, March 10 — Russia is going into the Genoa conference to lay the foundations for "big business," according to Nikolai Lenin, in an address to the metal workers here. "Russia welcomes participation in the Genoa conference," said Lenin. "We are going there in the position of traders beginning to do business. But we know there are great future possibilities."

Kentucky Opponents Of Evolution Beaten

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 10 — The Kentucky house of representatives killed the Ellis evolution bill, which prohibits "teaching of Darwinism, atheism, agnosticism or evolution as it pertains to the origin of life" in Kentucky tax-supported schools. The vote was 42 to 41 against the measure when it came up for passage.

The vote came after five hours of debate in which opponents of the measure pleaded with the house not to "bring about a return of intolerance" and the proponents charged that students were "being turned into infidels and agnostics" by the teaching of evolution at the University of Kentucky.

Leaders of the opposition had believed that the supporters of the bill had a large majority. When the first roll call showed only thirty-eight for the bill, two less than the number required for passage, a scramble began in which missing members were rounded up.

The second vote resulted in a tie, 41 to 41. Bruce Cundin, who said he was against the bill because he felt it was an infringement on personal liberty, had decided to vote on the first roll call. He finally was induced to vote against it, his ballot killing the bill.

Passage of the Ellis anti-evolution bill would mean the starting of a new form of legislation "that will lead to disaster," said Dr. Frank L. McVey, president of the University of Kentucky, when the measure was called up by the rules committee.

Representative Ellis, sponsor of the bill, had made the statement that Dr. McVey "did not know what he was talking about," when he said the teaching of seven sciences would have to be suspended if evolution was barred.

Mr. Ellis also charged that subjects were being taught at the state university that were demoralizing the youth of the state.

Representative Boiling asserted that Germany lost the war because of materialistic teachings and added that the German philosophers and Darwin were much the same kind of teachers.

Good Bass Year Says Stevenson

"Steve" Stevenson, premier fisherman, predicts that the bass are going to bite this spring, for the winter and weather has been ideal. He forms his opinion from long experience and observation, and states that this year duplicates the one when with two companions, they caught 107 bass in a day in the Vermilion river and he caught 67 of this number. He refuses to state what year that was but says he did not violate the law.

Steve declares that he has the record for catching the largest small-mouthed bass for the last seven years. His largest one weighed 4 3/4 pounds, and last year he caught one that weighed four pounds, five ounces. "It's no trick to catch those babies if you know how," says Steve. "You come with me, some day, and I'll show you how to fool them. The Vermilion river is an ideal place for this species of fish, and I have made many fine catches there."

WASHINGTON, March 10 — Far in advance of the debt funding negotiations, with foreign governments, officials of the United States expect that most of the debtors will find it impossible to adjust the debts on a 25 year maturity basis, as provided in the funding law.

Lloyd George Departs For Wales With Resignation Reported Signed —Limerick Peace Negotiations Broken Down

LONDON, March 10 — Premier Lloyd George, ill and depressed over the political situation, departed for Wales today, leaving behind the blackest state crisis since war days.

Angered by the violent attacks of his Tory enemies in parliament, the premier is reported to have drawn up his resignation and placed it in the hands of Austen Chamberlain to be delivered to King George when the Irish free state act is passed by the house of lords.

Actual revolution is threatened in India. The government post of secretary of India, is still vacant. E. S. Montagu having resigned upon the demand of the premier and it is virtually certain that the British viceroy, Lord Reading, will quit.

A serious situation prevails in Ireland, where a large section of the Irish republican army has revolted and set up the cry for a republic. The rebels are rallying at Limerick and "peace" negotiations

5 Days More To File Income Tax

The time for filing out income taxes will expire on the 15th of this month, so those who wish to avoid the penalty, and have not already attended to this important duty should get busy at once.

A representative of the revenue department will be at the postoffice until the 15th, and he is urging those who have not already done so to return to his office and fill out their returns instead of waiting until the last minute, thereby avoiding the rush that is sure to take place.

CONGRESSMAN C. L. KNIGHT FLAYS FEDERAL BONUS BILL

CONGRESSMAN C. L. KNIGHT who Openly Opposes Yank Bonus

WASHINGTON, March 10 — Representative Charles L. Knight of Akron made a speech to the house late Thursday in which he branded the bonus bill as "the cap sheaf upon the whole stack of class legislation," and accused Hanford MacNider, national commander of the American Legion of using language to President Harding, "which might have been expected from a captain of the praetorian guard to a weak and pusillanimous emperor, but hardly to the chief executive of this great republic."

"The bonus legislation," said Representative Knight in his speech to the house today, "is indefensible from either the economic or the patriotic standpoint. Let us get down to facts."

"The war has left us a heritage of debt which amounts to $23,-

000,000,000. That is a burden of $1,000 on every family in the United States. Our interest charges are over a billion dollars a year, and the state and federal taxation in one form or another is laying another blighting weight of perhaps $350 on every family in the country.

"Every breeze is vocal of the wailing clamor of the ever-increasing throngs who are teaching that it is the function of government to make men happy and prosperous here if indeed not to give them a harp and a crown across the Great Divide.

"Those of us who oppose these strange doctrines as unsound must oppose this bonus bill upon the cap sheaf upon the whole stack of class legislation."

cratic votes were more than enough in the judgment of the two leaders to insure ratification despite the efforts of the opposition to make further inroads on the lineup in support of the treaty.

Senator Reed, democrat of Missouri, suggested that the most question of its authorship promised to become as famous a conundrum as "how old is Ann?"

Reed was among the senators fighting its ratification who declared that, notwithstanding the statement of a high state department official that "who wrote it does not matter" the senate was entitled to know who did draft it before being called upon to approve it.

It was intimated that a resolution calling upon President Harding to inform the senate as to who wrote the treaty probably would be launched in the senate as a sequel to the state department's refusal to reveal its author, or authors and to the joint admission of senators Lodge and Underwood, as members of the American delegation to the armament conference, that they do not know whose work it was.

The criticism of the secrecy respecting its authorship, as well as the negotiations preceding the signing of it, continued to be voiced by Senators as debate was resumed with little prospect of a final vote on ratification for at least a week.

Sensors Lodge and Underwood professed not to be disturbed by the storm of opposition breaking against the treaty. It was understood that as a result of another canvass, or "count of noses" made by them they were convinced that at least twelve democratic votes would be cast for ratification and not more than four republican votes against it.

Interest in bowling circles centers around the game tonight between the Eagles and Moose. At their last meeting the Eagles took the league leadership away from the Moose. Since then they have gradually drawn ahead until now they are six games to the good. The Moose will try hard this evening to pull down this lead. There will be a good bunch of rooters on hand at the Gala alleys to cheer the teams on.

Galas Take Two From Temples 5

The Galas traveled over to the Temple alleys last night and then won two out of three games from the Temples. Both teams rolled well and it was a good match all the way. Weller was high man of the evening.

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Adele Garrison's New Phase of

Revelations of a Wife

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

What Madge Saw When She Became Conscious.

My little excursion into oblivion could not have lasted but a few seconds, for when I rallied to consciousness again after the blow from the swinging door in the railroad waiting-room, and opened my eyes, I found myself being swiftly carried across that same room.

Weak and dizzy, I closed my eyes again, but not until I had seen that the arm bearing me so swiftly and steadily was those of the apparently elderly foreigner, who on the stalled train had come to my aid with the plea that he was a friend of my father. Friend, perhaps, I decided, but contemporary never for the man was carrying me as easily and surely as he would a child, a feat seemingly impossible to a man of his venerable appearance.

My head was throbbing with pain, but through the beat of my brain pulsed back recurring something which I was vainly trying to remember, yet could not, although it seemed to dance elusive just beyond my grasp. "Come here," the man in whose arms I lay, encoiled the waiting-room door I heard him speak to a porter walking in front of us and carrying our bags, whom he evidently had increased into service.

"Get in there, pronto, and tell the porter to have the coach ready."

The voice was the deep, masterful voice which I had heard on the train, but there was that in it which suddenly recalled the elusive remembrance for which I had been searching. Surely I had not been dreaming, had really heard not this voice, but one with a haunting resemblance to it, call out "My God, Madge!" as "I" fell to the floor after the blow from the swinging door.

"Is Yoh Feelin' Bettah?"

I must have made some movement, for I saw the arm of the man carrying me shift ever so slightly, and knew that he was looking intently at me. Then he spoke, and there was nothing in his voice now that reminded me of any other. It was unmistakably alien, of the educated class, however, and the utterance was precise, stilted.

"Beseech you, Mm. Graham, do not stir until I place you on the couch in the waiting room. We must see how bad your injury is."

I did not answer him, nor did I open my eyes. I felt as though I never wished to see or hear of the man again, even though he had done nothing but aid me surely and tactfully. But the whole nerve-straining episode of the stalled train, followed by this odd accident, had been too much for me.

The Way Madge Evaded the Stranger.

If there is anything on earth to equal the alchemy and quick rising to an emergency of the colored attendants in railroad stations and on trains I'd be glad, in Dicky's parlance, to be "led to it."

The burly colored matron in the waiting-room changed no muscle in her face as she held out her hand for the five-dollar bill I proffered her, exhibiting no surprise whatever at my announcement that it was given to help me away, and forget that she had done so.

"Ta-as honey, Ah undahstands," she said soothingly. "Try standin' up. I'll help you."

She bent over me, assisted me to my feet, and held me firmly while I fought with the dizziness and weakness which for a minute or two threatened to vanquish my determination to get away from the waiting-room before the return to it of the mysterious foreigner who claimed to be a friend of my father, and who had come in search of a physician.

But will never triumph over the pain in the ridge on my forehead and I soon found myself able to stand alone and to smile encouragingly at the sympathetic matron.

"I'm perfectly all right now. Which way can I go so that he won't see me?" Her answer was ready. She evidently had been considering the problem ever since I first had been brought to the waiting-room.

"The best way will be for you to turn to the left—Oh, Selmy, you're jest in time! Look after my work for a minute. I've got an errand. Come 'long, honey."

"Where to, Ma'am?"

She picked up my bag and whisked me through a swinging door into the main waiting-room, then out again through another door into a corridor which I never had traversed before, and hurried me to a flight of stairs.

"I'll carry you bag to the top of the stairs," she said, breathlessly, for she was stout, and there you'll find a taxi. An' yoh can't count on me, honey. I'll never peach. But as soon as yoh see where yoh're goin' yoh must take care of that bump. Yoh're sure goin' to have one awful-lookin' black eye. Good-by."

We had reached the top of the stairs, and handing me my bag, she scuttled back down with never a backward glance. I noted and appreciated the delicacy and the swiftness of the action, and would be able to say truthfully that I had not the slightest idea of my position in the world.

MRS. BABE RUTH'S $75,000 SMILE

Mrs. George Ruth with Babe's contract.

Everybody is acquainted with Babe Ruth's smile that he pulls when he slams out a homer or signs a nice fat contract. Here's how his "better half" looks. Mrs. Babe was as tickled as any wife person could be when Babe signed a new contract for $50,000 and $500 per home run with the Yank owners. It virtually amounts to a $75,000 contract.

I had not the slightest idea myself of where I was going.

"Where to, Ma'am?" The driver touched his cap in the most approved fashion.

I named a nearby department store desperately, and set my mind to work to decide what I must do.

Madge Finds a Hotel.

I had two objects, one to elude the mysterious foreigner, the other to gain a shelter where I could rest and follow my kind old mentor's advice to take care of my hurt. That I must stay at some hotel for the night, I knew, for the delay of the train had made it impractical for me to start upon my hunt for Katie until the next morning. But which hotel? One not too near the station, I decided, despairingly wishing that my head would stop aching so that I could tackle the other half of my problem.

Used in her government secret work flashed into my mind.

"Never use the same taxi from your start to your destination," and as the car pulled up to the entrance of the department store, I felt the driver ready, tipped the man to a small coin in order that he might remember me neither for my generosity nor for my niceness.

It would be a simple proposition, I told myself. I would walk through the store, go out at another entrance upon another street, get a second taxi, and go to any small, quiet, first-class hotel. I had a horror of a large fashionable hotel, and was absolutely sure of rest and security.

The undertaking proved to be as simple as I had thought, but I was annoyed at the questioning, furtive glance which the second taxicab driver gave me, more disturbed by the curious hesitancy which I saw in the face of the room clerk at the hotel which I finally chose as my destination. For a frightened second I thought he was going to refuse me a room, then his face cleared, and he summoned a bellboy and handed him a key.

I meekly followed the lad and my bag to the lift, getting another searching glance from the man who ran the elevator, and as I stepped upon the floor the bellboy came, I accidentally turned my head and surprised a significant exchange of winks between the youths.

There was but one thought in my mind as I hurried down the corridor behind the confused bellboy. Above all things in the world I desired a good look at the man.

THE UTTERANCES OF A COURAGEOUS MAN

Thursday, on the floor of the House of Representatives, at Washington, Congressman C. L. Knight spoke strongly against the soldiers' bonus, and against certain leaders of the American Legion who are entrusted by the Legion with charge of the measure.

We do not agree with Mr. Knight's conclusions. The conscription of men, and the failure to conscript wealth during the war, imposes, in our judgment, an obligation to adjust the compensations for that period. But, at the same time, we recognize how men can reasonably argue against the soldiers' bonus at this time, and by taking a certain premise, argue strongly against it at any time.

We will have to acknowledge that Congressman Knight, in the position he has assumed, is unquestionably sincere. He will be a candidate for Governor, if Governor Davis is not a candidate. The general belief is that Mr. Davis will not be a candidate, so in all probability Mr. Knight will be out looking for votes in the state of Ohio during the coming campaign.

There are two hundred and forty-three thousand ex-service men in the state. On the average, each one of these men will probably have at least one friend whom he can influence in his vote. This would mean there is a possible five hundred thousand votes to be affected by the attitude which a man takes upon the bonus bill.

Mr. Knight is a keen observer and an able man, and yet, in the face of this, he declares himself against the bonus. We feel that we should express our admiration for the courage and sincerity of any man in public life who does what Mr. Knight is doing, regardless of whether we agree with him or not. We know that he is expressing his own judgment, unaffected by the ordinary political influences. One at least knows where he stands.

The voters can depend upon such a man to stand, after an election, the same way he stood before the election. They are not buying a "pig in the poke." They can determine as to whether they will vote for him by his declarations and his actions.

If all men for legislative positions particularly, would do as Mr. Knight is doing, the people would not be voting as blindly as they do, and we would suggest that sometimes a man is more trustworthy, with whom we do not agree upon all questions, but whose attitude is certain, than the one who agrees with all people, before election, while he dodges all his promises after election.

We have not agreed with Mr. Knight in all of his positions, but we give him credit for the courage of keeping his own self-respect by expressing his own opinions.

YOU CAN STILL THINK IN KENTUCKY

The Kentucky Legislature has defeated the anti-evolution bill. You can still think in Kentucky. You can still get an education in Kentucky. Science is still safe in Kentucky, but not very safe. Professors can still teach in Kentucky and preserve their self-respect.

It was rather a spectacular method of bringing the results of modern scholarship to a supreme test.

Kentucky saved itself by a small margin, one vote, from being placed in the ridiculous position of driving its educated men, as well as those seeking an education, from its college halls.

Had such an absurd law been placed upon the statute books of Kentucky, a diploma from any institution in the state would arouse a sense of humor or contempt in the future in the mind of anyone to whom it was presented, depending upon their cast of mind.

Now the issue is to be threshed out in the various districts of Kentucky, and in the name of religion ignorance and superstition will attempt to drive out learning and scholarship from the educational institutions. We had supposed those days were over in civilized countries.

We are not alarmed however. Truth is the mightiest force which ever combated for the mastery in the world and it is always bound to win.

How to Use Hair Tonic That Fails to Produce New Locks

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Attorney C. A. Metcalf has written again of the progress of his journey to the Holy Land, this time from Algiers.

Off Algiers, Africa, February 13, 1922.

Seville and Gibraltar Since my last report we have visited Cadiz. Space will forbide more than mere mention of these parts. Cadiz is the port from which Columbus sailed when he discovered America. It is a walled city, at least towards the sea, and was formerly the chief city of Spain. Now it is chiefly noted for its ancient architecture and ruins.

The ride to Seville, ninety-five miles north was through fine vineyards, orchards and gardens of tropical fruits and produce. Evidently it is controlled by landlords living in luxury and charming surroundings, while scattered here and there were the homes of peasants, many of them built of sod, or some such material, with no windows and but one visible door.

The railway is evidently one of the main lines, but is a crude affair, the engine being perhaps one-fourth the size and weight of American engines, and the same is true of freight cars. All side door compartments and the rails are also small. The cars have single trucks, which tosses the cars from side to side at the end of each rail.

At twenty miles an hour, a little more than the DeWitt Clinton, nearly a century ago, the train at Seville is far ahead of Cadiz. The main points of interest being its cathedral and the castle occupied for a few weeks each April by the king and queen, as a palace.

Gibraltar is not only imposing, but interesting. The highest point is about 1,800 feet above the sea, being almost perpendicular. The whole rock and fortress as seen from the ship resembles a crouching lion, but contrary to expectations it slopes gradually towards the straits, the bluff being the north or inland portion. Although in the absolute control of England most of the several thousands who live there are Spaniards, speaking this language only.

Wherever you turn in southern Europe beggars abound. The streets are full of donkeys and crude vehicles bearing bundles. We have seen very few autos.

To sum up my experience to date, I would say that southern Europe prides itself on its ruins and relics of other years. Thus it faces the past, while my country faces the future, which is far better. It will close by saying that Timothy Standby was right. The word "Prudential" is not on Gibraltar.

Grant Centenary To Be Observed In Ohio In April

COLUMBUS, March 10.—In a proclamation, issued today, Governor Davis urges all communities to join with the Grand Army of the Republic in fittingly commemorating on April 27 next, the 60th anniversary of the birth of the late U. S. Grant in Clermont county log cabin. The governor suggested that in schools and churches the anniversary, which will be observed throughout the nation, be marked by appropriate patriotic exercises, and that public authorities and patriotic societies and organizations, representing the general public, actively participate in community observances of the centenary.

Officials of the G. A. R. point out that this, probably, will be the last time it will, as an organization, seek the aid of public officials and the people generally to honor the memory of any of the great Civil War leaders.

One of the main features of the celebration will be a special memorial service to be held under auspices of the G. A. R. at Pleasant, Grant's birthplace, which will be attended by many of the foremost present day leaders in American life.

Grant's life teaches a lesson in Americanism that should be deeply impressed upon the rising generation and coming generations, so as to perpetuate our traditions of freedom, and Governor Davis. "In paying tribute to the great soldier and statesman, this lesson should be emphasized."

BRITISH WILL ARREST GANDHI, INDIAN CHIEF

LONDON, Mar. 10.—A stiffened Indian policy is expected to follow the resignation of E. S. Montagu, secretary for India, according to opinion expressed in official circles today.

Sir Hamar Greenwood, secretary for Ireland, was mentioned as a possible successor. P. R. Hamar's office will be abolished when the house of lords passes the Irish free state act.

Apprehension is felt here that the ousting of Mr. Montagu may result in fresh disorders in India. The former secretary was very close to the moslem element of the population. Dispatches from Delhi said that feeling was running high.

According to a Reuter dispatch from Delhi the arrest of Mahatma Gandhi, chief leader of the Indian non-co-operationists, or nationalists is eminent.

The London Times predicts that the resignation of Mr. Montagu will hasten the resignation of Premier Lloyd George.

PASTOR STRIKES, PARISHIONERS ARE FLOYED

ELK RAPIDS, Mich., March 10.—Charging that his parishioners attended church merely to "have a pleasant time," the Rev. Merton W. Ross, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church here has gone on strike and refused to officiate at services until his congregation reforms.

The alleged use of hymn books by the younger church-goers to cover handclaps during the service, is reported as one of the practices of which the pastor complains.

"So far as I have been able to ascertain," the letter announcing Dr. Ross' strike declares "the only objective which our people have before them is that of perpetuating a sort of social club."

"From this time on my ministrations will be performed privately, rather than publicly. I will administer the holy sacraments of the church to those who desire them and I will officiate at burial for the dead when requested, but I must decline to officiate at the regular public services of the church."

Mr. Ross says he also objects strenuously to the practice of his men parishioners pinching horse-shoes outside of the church, delaying the service until the matches were finished.

WISE WOMEN

A famous medical man of ancient times states regarding his writings that they were but a collection of knowledge obtained from the "Wise Women."

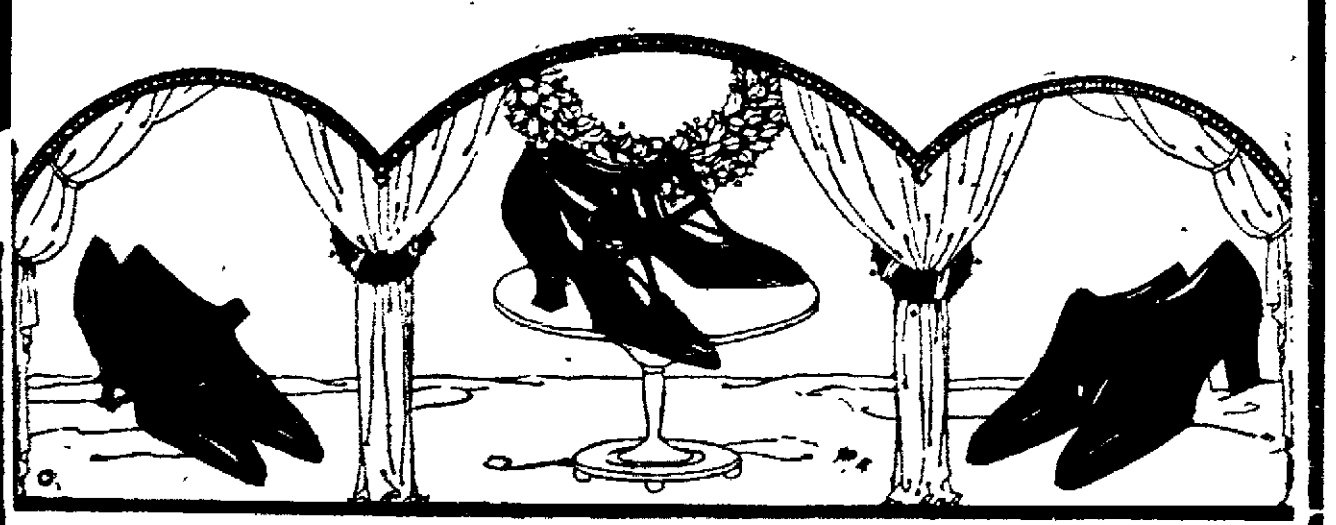

Do you realize that in those times the women, and not the men, knew about the healing properties of medicinal plants, roots and herbs? From the earliest times, women had a knowledge of the treatment of disease and of the healing merits of roots and herbs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was originated by a woman, Lydia E. Pinkham, and is now known and praised by women of all ages. It is prepared from roots and herbs having medicinal action of great value in the treatment of troubles women so often have.—Advt.

After Dinner Story

A little boy stood at his garden gate and howled and howled and howled. A passing lady paused beside him.

"What's the matter, little man?" she asked.
"O-o-o-o!" he wailed. "Pa and ma won't take me to the movies."
"But don't make such a noise. Do they ever take you when you cry like that?"
"S-s-sometimes they d-do and sometimes they d-don't," wept the lad, "but it ain't no trouble to yell."

"With this machine," argued the agent, "washing is made so easy that you will be able to dispense with the services of a laundress."
"Oh, but that would never do," objected the lady of the house. "If I didn't have a laundress come in one day a week I never would know what is going on in the neighborhood."

"Who was the poet who wrote about man's inhumanity to man?" asked Mr. Bibbles, in a choking voice.

"I don't recall," said Mr. Jaggs. "What reminded you of that quotation?"

"I've just discovered that I paid $10 for a quart of cold tea."

"Well, that's settled!" sighed a north side man to his wife the other evening, after he, apparently, had been ruminating over the holiday nightmare. "Now let's go to a movie."

"What's settled?" she asked.

"Oh, I was just figuring out what I would do with $100,000 if some one should give it to me," he replied.

"Well, what would you do?"

"I'd give it right back to the fellow that gave it to me and save the trouble of paying it out in small amounts. Come on."

Among the many amusing stories which Mr. Eugene C. Ari has at his command is one concerning a prize fight which occurred in America. One of the contestants had been instructed by his father to cable the result as soon as the fight was over. The son duly sent off the following message: "Won easily. Seventy-five rounds."

Polished Oak— The Floor Beautiful

There is nothing that yields so much of lasting satisfaction about the home as polished oak floors. Oak floors are in expensive for the reason of their permanency and because less labor is needed to keep them in order.

For the new home, or to increase the comfort and beauty of the old home, there is nothing more satisfying than the floor of oak.

For the new home, you will probably choose our 13-16x 2 1-4" face oak flooring. If you are planning to lay oak over the old floors you will be glad to know that we have the 3-8x2" face. In fact we are well stocked with both, for we have just received a car of beautiful oak flooring—the best that grows. And the price is less than half of what it was at this time last year.

If you will give us the size of your rooms, we will cheerfully advise you of the cost of material.

Speaks Highly of This Home Made Cough Remedy

Says It Acts With Unusual Speed—Loosens the Mucus—Relieves the Irritation and Stops the Cough

Costs Next to Nothing—for a Big Supply

Whenever anyone in my family catches cold and begins to cough and sneeze, and hawk and breathe heavy, I don't take me many minutes to fix up a remedy that will drive away all such troubles in double quick time.

It's no secret—anyone can make a fine pint of the finest cough medicine in the world for trifling sum.

Get from any druggist: one ounce of Parment double strength—to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one half pint—that's all there is to it.

But now you've got a real medicine—mind you the first spoonful you take acts directly on the membrane of the throat and nose, the tickling ceases almost instantly—the inflammation begins to disappear—up comes the stubborn mucus and often in 24 hours every trace of the cough that frightened you is gone.

It's really remarkable how this home made remedy acts on the mucous membrane and that is one reason it is so helpful to thousands of starry sufferers.—Adv.

Will a fourth man some day enter into the life of Madalynne Obenchain and bring her the happiness and contentment she has failed to find so far? Followers of the recent trial of Madalynne on a charge of murdering one of three men she has loved to date, are wondering. Arthur C. Burch, another of the trio, is charged with the same murder, and Ralph Obenchain—her old college love and divorced husband, has stood by her in her troubles despite the fact that she spurned him once and has said she will not go back to him.

from Friday till Monday at the Fred Pitt home.

Joe Waite is able to be out again after his recent illness.

We are not much in favor of stale news, but this article, it is hoped will not be called stale, for it will bring to mind that we are each and every one of us 17 years older than when it was written. This article to follow was printed in the Oberlin News on Feb. 10, 1905, the copy being kept by one of our older residents, who has started housecleaning and happened to come across it. It is written as follows:

"The News reporter took in the streets at Pittsfield this week and arrived home safely without getting hurt by any of the street cars or caught in any of the elevator accidents which are sometimes liable to occur in the mammoth 'Pittsfield Arcade.' On entering the little village of Pittsfield, a few miles south of Oberlin, the reporter stood for a minute, most bewildered and although he landed in the center of the town, began to wonder if the conductor hadn't made a mistake and let him off at the wrong place. After staring a few minutes he finally observed a few interesting objects, one being a large and beautiful monument, erected in honor of the brave men who fought for the freedom of the Southern slaves. Another welcomed sight (in being a severe cold day) was a little 2x4 building almost hidden from view by nut trees and snow drifts. On entering he found a blazing fire and on a box with his feet on the stove sat the proprietor of the 'Pittsfield Arcade,' who met him with a greeting of 'Well, how're you? Glad to see yer. Come in and take a chair (handing him a store box) and warm yourself.' The generous and prosperous proprietor of the 'Arcade' is George Washington Hines, also one of the best auctioneers in the country. The reporter began to wonder whether the 'Arcade' ever sold anything or not, but he didn't have to wait long until the proprietor began to wish he had a floor walker, a cash boy and a few clerks. Customers began to arrive. One got a sack of flour and carried it away on his shoulder, while another a pound of coffee and so on. After the customers had all left the proprietor again turned his attention to the reporter, telling him of past experiences, etc., and a few good stories. Before the 'Arcade Man' had finished his story a young tall and rustic looking farmer had come stumbling into the store, with two cents with which he desired to purchase two sticks of gum. Mr. Hines said the 'Pittsfield Arcade' was given its name by a conductor on the C. & S. W. line, Pittsfield has two churches, the M. E. of which Rev. Kepler is pastor and the Congregational, of which Rev. G. C. Enders is pastor. The Postoffice is no more, having been abolished last September. The telephone exchange is in the residence of Mr. Cressier. A new saw mill and feed grinder on the northeast corner of the public square is a thing of especial interest to the Pittsfield population. Although the reporter has been somewhat inclined to make a few humorous remarks about this little village, he does have to admit the entire community is inhabited by industrious farmers. Few farms can be found to be in better shape than those in Pittsfield township."

Now, if this same reporter could visit us again in 1922, what would he say? For sure, the "Arcade" is doing good business, once more, under the management of N. Lounsbrough and wife, and some of the boys and girls who used to go to the store for groceries for mother, are now sending their own children to this same little store for the same necessities, and how many of us at that time ever dreamed of airplanes flying over us and especially in winter, as one passed over the north part of our town one day last week, going northwest. If the same progress continues in roads, etc., in another 17 years, where will we be? On the map, long before then, we hope, in a fine new centralized school building, somewhere on the "square" or near it, where all our boys and girls will be going to school and looking back and being glad they didn't live any sooner. Dare we dream?

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance—Advt.

Last Spoonful Same as the First

Calumet is made under such exacting conditions — packed in such a scientific manner, that its leavening strength and purity never vary. It retains its original strength for months after leaving the factories.

When you tip the can to get the last spoonful, you know your baking will turn out all right—the last spoonful is the same as the first. This uniform quality of is cause for its big demand. Housewives know they can depend upon the results obtained—that climatic conditions or temperature cannot deteriorate its positive leavening power.

When you buy baking powder remember these facts—that a uniform leavener means bakings that do not vary in quality—that Calumet is uniform.

A pound can of Calumet contains full 16 oz. Some baking powders come in 12 ounce instead of 16 ounce cans. Be sure you get a lb. when you want it.

Probate Judge Clyde Wilcox is a might busy man today, and his office is crowded. OFFENDING TOE CHISELED OFF BY SOUTH AMHERST SUFFERER

SOUTH AMHERST, O., March 10.—Ingrown toenails better give Frank Broughten of this village a wide berth or he'll change their name to "Souvenir" and that's all there is to it.

Broughten, who lives at the home of S. O. Bailey on West Main st., made known his new policies and then proceeded to demonstrate them today.

For several days the second toe on Broughten's left foot has annoyed him considerably.

Anyways, Frank decided to put an end to that sort of thing. Being a man of few words and much action, Broughten repaired to the Bailey barn where he secured a hammer and chisel and proceeded to amputate the offending member.

Returning to the Bailey home, he displayed his souvenir.

"The dad blamed thing won't bother me any more," he said.

Dr. A. F. McQueen was called and dressed the wound.

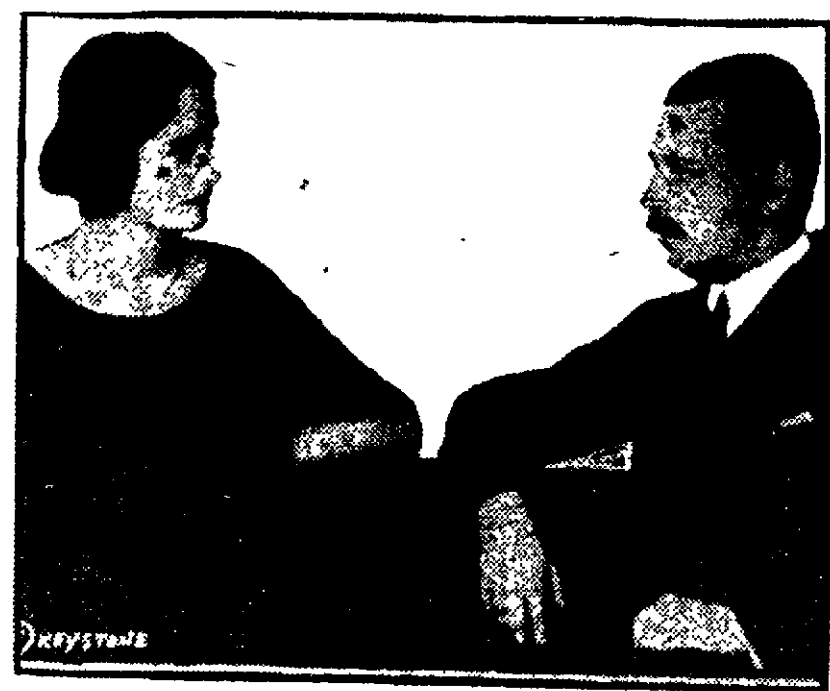

MEDINA

MEDINA, March 10. — "Red" Radmanich is out $1,200 on a confidence game. Two men induced him to be custodian of $21,000, a former Medina contractor swindled local people out of 20 years ago, and now wished to pay them back, and after drawing the $1,200 out of the bank and giving it in exchange for the "Red", the confidence men holding the key to the valise. Radmanich cut open the valise to find four $1.00 bills wrapped on a large wad of paper. The confidence men mentioned Elyria and Radmanich says he knew by sight one of the men when he was employed at the National Tube Co. at Lorain.

When an Akron, Canton and Youngstown passenger train engine whistle failed to shut off, the town folks thought it was the fire siren but were unable to locate the blaze.
